STAFF RECOGNITION

Many congratulations to Gail Bill, who is the first I & H Brown employee to become a professionally qualified engineering technician (EngTech). Having recently passed her Professional Review with the Institution of Civil Engineers, Gail is now entitled to use the letters EngTech MICE after her name.

Gail joined us as a Trainee Engineer in September 2013 and has shown terrific enthusiasm to learn and to develop her career. She has completed a part time HNC course in Civil Engineering at Glasgow Kelvin College and in 2016 she began the BSc Environmental Civil Engineering course with Glasgow Caledonian University.

While doing all that and proving to be a valued member of our site staff, Gail also obtained an NVQ Level 3 qualification and a Supervisor (Gold) CSCS card. She is currently the Site Engineer on our Dunfermline project and working towards her SMSTS safety qualification.

Gail is the latest success from our staff development programme, which includes a training scheme that is formally accredited by the Institution of Civil Engineers. We wish her every success from this very promising start to her career in the industry.
